

ENZYME LOADING: When enzyme levels fall in the body three things may happen. The subject may experience gas, belching, pyorrhea (pus from the gums), and difficulty focusing the eyes (The small muscles of the eyes weaken when protein levels fall even slightly). If any of these symptoms are present it may be a pre-indicator. Also, if the ingestion of high doses of enzymes on an empty stomach causes nausea, Dr. Kelly believes that this is the body digesting a tumor somewhere. The information on this page is not meant to replace medical advice but it is hoped that it may help you somewhat in your search for better health.